Homemade mince pies, cakes and Christmas crafts for sale

I am fundraising for Project Trust, an educational charity, connecting young people, with valuable skills, such as IT, STEM and languages, with communities around the world in need of these skills, providing lifechanging opportunities to the communities where the volunteers are based through allowing young people access to an education they otherwise wouldn't be able to receive, opening many doors for their futures. Next year I am going to Chile to teach English with Project Trust, which will have the potential to really improve the educational experience and future opportunities of the young people in the community where I will be located. On top of this, it will be the most valuable educational opportunity I have ever received, allowing me to experience a different culture, fully immersing myself in their community, I am hoping to return a much more rounded and worldly person as well as hopefully improving my Spanish and developing a confidence and fluency in the language.
